Cultural Fire: Igniting Pathways and Strengthening Futures

Fire has always been a source of connection, renewal and growth. In Aboriginal culture, fire brings people together, strengthens community and nurtures the land.

Pindari's Indigenous Employment and Engagement Strategy draws on this wisdom. From an initial spark, each initiative fuels a greater flame — building sustainable pathways for Indigenous employment, empowerment and engagement across our operations.

Our collective fire continues to grow stronger, lighting the way for lasting opportunity, shared success and meaningful impact.

Our Commitment

As a proud Aboriginal Business, Pindari is dedicated to creating tangible opportunities and building sustainable Indigenous futures through collaborative partnerships, training and active support for Aboriginal people, businesses and communities.

Indigenous Employment & Engagement Strategy

Pindari's Indigenous Employment & Engagement strategy is embedded in how we deliver for our clients, creating measurable social and economic outcomes. We actively grow Indigenous participation across our workforce and supply chain while building strong, enduring partnerships with the communities in which we operate.

Six key focus areas underpin this commitment:

- Strategic Leadership
- Cultural Strength
- Employment Opportunities
- Supporting Careers
- Building Capability
- Community Engagement

The Cultural Fire

The Cultural Fire brings this strategy to life as a visual representation of shared responsibility and collective progress.

Developed in collaboration with Indigenous artist Kevin Bynder, the artwork visually reflects Pindari's circle of engagement with individuals, communities and organisations coming together to create opportunity and strengthen futures.

The fire symbolises the spark of opportunity, while the expanding design represents pathways and community partnerships.

- Pathways to Success: Apprenticeships and traineeships providing clear career pathways, with strong transition into long-term employment across site, client and head office roles.
